

David Adjaye and Aston Martin Team Up, Giorgetti Designs a Model Unit, and More Real Estate News

Here's what you need to know

By Dan Avery

November 4, 2020

From high-profile design commissions to exciting listings, there is always something new happening in the world of real estate. In this weekly roundup, AD PRO has everything you need to know.

Milestones

Deborah Berke's Latest Readies for Its Debut

New York architecture and design firm Deborah Berke Partners brings its vision to Lower Manhattan with its first downtown tower. With units starting at $1.295 million, 77 Greenwich emphasizes warm minimalism through natural materials and expert craftsmanship.

The 42-story tower soars above Battery Park, with a pleated glass-curtain-wall façade designed by FXCollaborative providing water views from each of the 90 residences, which begin on the 15th floor. Retail space, ample amenities, and an elementary school on the ground floor solidify 77 Greenwich's appeal to FiDi workers looking to trade their commute for a work-live hybrid.